

Understand what is Insulin and what is Insulin Resistance?

Insulin is the glucose utilization hormone, which is produced in the body by specialized beta cells in the pancreas gland, which lies near the stomach. When we eat food, the stomach signals the Pancreas to produce Insulin. The Insulin hormone is critical to making energy from glucose within the body cells, and without it, the body cannot produce energy to sustain itself.

